D Write three true sentences about you: I've... / I've never... — o'zingiz haqingizda 3 gap

4 Reading · Reading Part 3 format

Read the text. Choose the correct heading for each paragraph (1–5) from the list (A–G). There are two extra headings. — har bir abzatsga sarlavha tanlang (2 ta ortiqcha)

Your First Trip Abroad: Five Simple Tips

1. _____ Have you ever travelled abroad alone? If not, your first trip can be exciting but also a little scary. Before you go, make a list of everything you need: your passport, tickets, money and a phone charger. Check the list twice. Many travellers have forgotten something important at home, and it has spoiled their holiday.

2. _____ Don't put all your money in one place. Keep some cash in your bag, some in your pocket and a bank card in your luggage. If you lose your wallet, you will still have money for food and a taxi.

3. _____ You don't need to speak the local language perfectly, but a few words will help a lot. "Hello", "thank you" and "how much?" are enough to start. Local people are usually happy when tourists try to speak their language.

4. _____ Hotels in the city centre are often expensive. Hostels and guest houses are cheaper, and you can meet other young travellers there. Read reviews online before you book, and look at the photos carefully.

5. _____ Finally, don't try to see everything in two days. Choose three or four places you really want to visit. Sit in a café, watch people, and enjoy the moment. Sometimes the best memories come from slow days, not busy ones.

Headings

A) Learn a little of the language

B) Plan your shopping

C) Prepare carefully before you leave

D) Take it easy

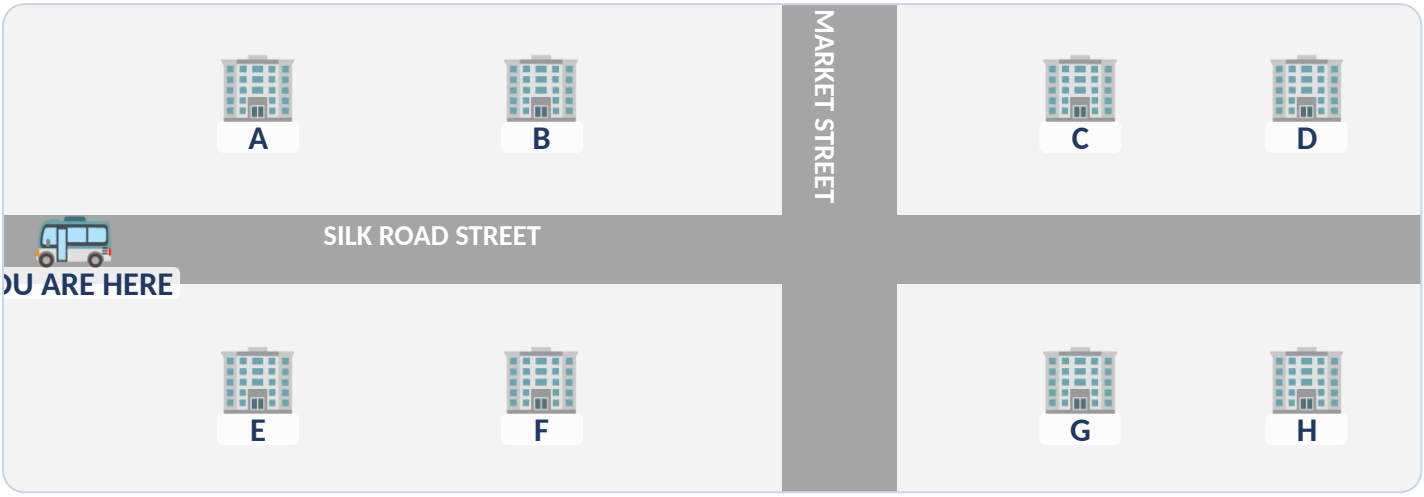

E) Keep your money safe

F) Find a cheap place to stay

G) Travel with your family

5 Listening · Listening Part 4 format 🎧 Track 1

You will hear a tour guide talking about a town centre. Label the places (1–5) on the map (A–H). There are three extra letters. — xaritada joylarni belgilang (3 ta ortiqcha harf)

1. hotel _____
2. museum _____
3. café _____
4. souvenir shop _____
5. pharmacy _____

6 Speaking · Gapirish

Part 1.2 — Look at the two pictures. Tell me what you can see in these pictures. (Structure 4) — ikki rasmni tasvirlang — Struktura 4

The Boy Who Fixes Phones

When Sanjar was eleven, his father's old phone stopped working. Instead of throwing it away, Sanjar opened it with a small screwdriver. "I didn't know anything about phones," he remembers. "I just wanted to see what was inside." He watched videos online for weeks and finally found the problem: a broken battery. He bought a new one for 40,000 som, and the phone worked again.

That was four years ago. Since then, Sanjar has repaired more than two hundred phones. At first he fixed phones for his family and neighbours for free. Then people started to pay him. Now he has a small table in his uncle's shop at the market, and he works there every Saturday and Sunday.

Sanjar's parents were worried at the beginning. "We thought it was a waste of time," says his mother. "But his school marks have not got worse. In fact, his maths is better now." Sanjar has saved most of the money he has earned. He wants to study computer engineering at university.

Not everything has been easy. Last year he broke an expensive phone screen and had to pay for a new one himself. "It was a hard lesson," he says. "Now I always tell customers about the risks before I start." His advice for other teenagers? "Don't be afraid to try. You learn the most from your mistakes."

1. How did Sanjar first learn to repair phones?
A) at a special school
B) from his uncle
C) by watching videos
D) from a book

2. What was wrong with his father's phone?
A) the screen
B) the battery
C) the camera
D) the charger

3. Where does Sanjar work now?
A) in his own shop
B) at home
C) at school
D) in a shop at the market

4. What happened last year?
A) He lost a customer's phone.
B) He damaged a screen.
C) He stopped working.
D) He failed an exam.

5. Sanjar was eleven when he opened his first phone. _____

6. He has always asked people to pay for his work. _____

7. His parents liked his hobby from the start. _____

8. Sanjar's maths has improved. _____

9. Sanjar's uncle also repairs phones. _____

Should School Start Later?

In many countries, school starts at eight o'clock or even earlier. But scientists say this may be a mistake. Research shows that teenagers' bodies work on a different clock from adults'. Most teenagers feel sleepy late at night and find it very difficult to wake up early. If they get up at six, they often come to school tired.

In 2016, a group of schools in the United States moved their first lesson from 7:30 to 8:45. The results were surprising. Students slept about forty minutes more every night. Their marks in maths and science went up, and fewer students were late. Teachers also said that classes were calmer.

However, not everyone agrees with the idea. Some parents start work early and want to take their children to school on the way. Bus companies say later timetables cost more money. And if school starts later, it will also finish later, which means that students will have less time for sport and other activities in the afternoon.

Experts say there is no perfect answer. But they agree on one thing: teenagers need between eight and ten hours of sleep. If they don't get enough sleep, they won't learn well, whatever time school starts.

Summary

Scientists believe teenagers have a different body (1) _____ from adults. When some American schools started later, students got more sleep and their (2) _____ improved. But some people are against the change: later timetables are more expensive for (3) _____ companies, and students will have less time for (4) _____ after school.

5. What happened in the American schools?

A) Students went to bed earlier.
B) Fewer students were late.
C) Teachers worked longer.
D) Lessons became shorter.

6. What do all experts agree about?

A) School should start at 8:45.
B) Parents should decide.
C) Teenagers need a lot of sleep.
D) Sport is more important than lessons.

4 Reading · Reading Part 3 format

Read the text. Choose the correct heading for each paragraph (1–5) from the list (A–G). There are two extra headings. — sarlavhalar (2 ta ortiqcha)

The Plastic Problem

1. _____ Every year, about 300 million tonnes of plastic are produced in the world. Only a small part of it is recycled. The rest is burnt, buried or simply thrown away, and much of it ends up in rivers and seas.

2. _____ Plastic doesn't disappear. A plastic bottle can stay in nature for 450 years. Over time it breaks into very small pieces called microplastics. These tiny pieces have been found in fish, in salt and even in drinking water.

3. _____ Some countries have already taken action. In Rwanda, plastic bags were banned in 2008, and today the streets are some of the cleanest in Africa. In many European supermarkets, customers now pay for every plastic bag, so they bring their own bags from home.

4. _____ Young people are often the most active. In Tashkent, a group of school students started collecting plastic bottles in their neighbourhood. The bottles are sold to a recycling company, and the money is used to buy books for the school library.

5. _____ Everyone can help in small ways: carry a cloth bag, use a metal water bottle, and say no to plastic straws. If millions of people make these small changes, the result will be huge.

Headings

A) A problem that lasts for centuries

B) Teenagers who make a difference

C) How much plastic we use

D) The history of plastic

E) Simple steps for everybody

F) Laws that changed a country

G) Why recycling is expensive

The Village Where People Live Longer

On the Japanese island of Okinawa, there are more people over one hundred years old than almost anywhere else in the world. Scientists have studied the islanders for more than forty years to understand their secret. Their answer is surprisingly simple: the way people eat, move and live together.

Okinawans eat a lot of vegetables, especially sweet potatoes, and very little meat or sugar. Their meals are small. In fact, they follow an old rule called hara hachi bu, which means "eat until you are eighty per cent full". It is said that this habit alone helps them avoid many illnesses.

Old people on Okinawa don't go to the gym, but they are very active. Most of them work in their gardens every day, walk to the market and sit on the floor instead of chairs, so they get up and down many times a day. This keeps their legs and backs strong.

Perhaps the most important thing is friendship. Many Okinawans belong to a small group of friends called a moai. The friends meet regularly, help each other and share their problems. It is widely believed that strong relationships reduce stress and help people live longer.

However, things are changing. Young Okinawans now eat more fast food, and many of them have moved to big cities. Doctors are worried that the island may soon lose its famous long life.

1. Why have scientists studied Okinawa?
A) The food there is very expensive.
B) Many people there live very long lives.
C) There are a lot of doctors.
D) It is a new tourist place.

2. What does "hara hachi bu" mean?
A) Eat only vegetables.
B) Never eat meat.
C) Stop eating before you are full.
D) Eat three times a day.

3. Why do old people have strong legs?
A) They go to the gym.
B) They do a lot of everyday activity.
C) They swim in the sea.
D) They sit on chairs.

4. What is a "moai"?
A) a type of meal
B) a garden
C) a group of friends
D) a doctor

5. Okinawans eat a lot of sugar. _____

6. Older Okinawans often sit on the floor. _____

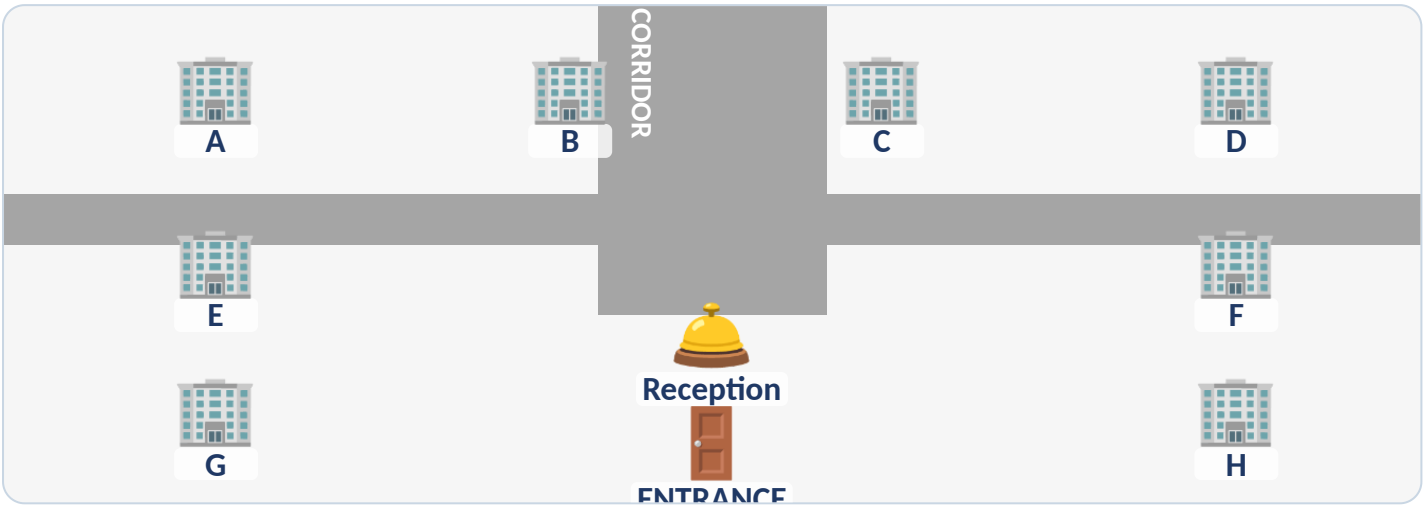

7. Moai groups meet every Sunday. _____

8. Young Okinawans eat differently from older people. _____

9. Okinawa has the best hospitals in Japan. _____

A Night of Sumalak

Every March, before Navruz, women in many Uzbek neighbourhoods gather to cook sumalak, a sweet dish made from young wheat. Cooking it is not quick: the wheat is grown for several days, crushed, and then cooked in a huge pot for almost twenty-four hours. Someone has to stir the pot all the time, so the women take turns through the night.

Last year I joined my neighbours for the first time. When I arrived at about ten in the evening, the fire was already burning and the older women were telling stories. While some were stirring the pot, others were singing traditional songs. Nobody was looking at their phone — everyone was talking and laughing.

There is an old custom: while the sumalak is cooking, people make a wish. Small stones are put at the bottom of the pot. If you find one in your bowl, it is said that your wish will come true. I didn't find a stone, but my little cousin did, and she was so happy that she showed it to everyone.

At sunrise the sumalak was finally ready. It was dark brown and tasted like sweet chocolate, even though no sugar is added. We shared it with neighbours, friends and even strangers who were walking past. For me, that night was not only about food, but also about being part of a community.

Summary

Sumalak is cooked for about a day, so women (1) _____ the pot all night. During the evening, people sing songs and tell (2) _____. According to an old (3) _____, finding a stone means your wish will come true. Although no (4) _____ is used, the dish tastes very sweet.

5. What surprised the writer most about the evening?

A) the size of the pot
B) that nobody used their phones
C) the cold weather
D) the number of men

6. What is the main idea of the last paragraph?

A) Sumalak is like chocolate.
B) The writer found a stone.
C) The night was about people, not only food.
D) Sumalak is sold to strangers.

The Green School

In 2021 a school in Samarkand decided to become "green". First, solar panels were put on the roof. Now most of the school's electricity is made by the sun. Then the students planted two hundred trees around the school. Every class looks after its own trees. Plastic bottles were banned in the canteen, and water fountains were installed instead. Last year the school won a national prize for the environment. The head teacher says the money will be used to build a garden where students can grow vegetables.

1. The school started its green project in 2021. _____
2. All the electricity comes from solar panels. _____
3. Each class takes care of some trees. _____
4. The students sell the vegetables they grow. _____
5. The prize money will pay for a garden. _____

The World of Advertising

1. _____ A hundred years ago, adverts were simple: a picture and a few words in a newspaper. Today companies spend billions of dollars on advertising, and the average person sees thousands of adverts every day — on TV, on buses, on phones and even in video games.

2. _____ Many companies no longer pay only for TV adverts. Instead, they pay influencers to show their products. Although followers know this is advertising, they often trust a blogger more than a TV advert, because the blogger seems like a friend.

3. _____ Some adverts are designed especially for children. Bright colours, cartoon characters and free toys make children want the product. In several countries, adverts for sweets and fast food are not allowed during children's TV programmes.

4. _____ Not all adverts are bad. Social adverts teach people to wear seat belts, save water or stop smoking. A clever social advert can change the behaviour of millions of people in a short time.

5. _____ So how can we protect ourselves? Experts suggest asking three questions: Who made this advert? What do they want me to do? What information is missing? Despite being simple, these questions can save us a lot of money.

Headings

A) Adverts that help society

B) How advertising has grown

C) Why we believe bloggers

From Village Boy to Chef

Farrukh grew up in a village in the Fergana Valley. His mother cooked for weddings, and as a boy he spent hours watching her. "She never used a recipe," he remembers. "Everything was in her head and her hands."

At eighteen, Farrukh moved to Tashkent and found a job washing dishes in a hotel restaurant. The work was hard and the salary was low, but he watched the chefs carefully. After a year, the head chef noticed that he was talented and moved him to the kitchen.

In 2019 Farrukh won a cooking competition in Istanbul with a modern version of his mother's plov. Soon after, he was invited to work in a famous restaurant in Dubai. He has been working there for five years, and now he is a head chef himself.

Although he lives abroad, Farrukh visits his village every summer. Last year he opened a free cooking school there for young people. "If I could give one piece of advice," he says, "it would be: start at the bottom and never stop learning."
